

Architect: Don Fulda and Ryan Rominger of Ward-Young Architecture & Planning

Builder: Loverde Builders

Interior: Ross Kowalski and Christopher Hoover of EDS

Landscape: Betty Anderson-Fulda Landscape Design and John Crus of Green Envy

Year Completed: 2009

Square Feet: 2,729

Rooms with a View

West Shore lakefront is light and livable

TEXT BY SUSAN D. ROCK / PHOTOS BY ASA GILMORE

With lakefront property at a premium, Tahoe architects and builders are often faced with finding solutions for extreme design challenges. Such was the case for Don Fulda of Ward-Young Architecture & Planning, who was given the task of siting a home on a 50-foot-wide lakefront lot at a 40 degree slope, its neighbor just 15 feet away.

"Don nailed it the first time out," says Meeks Bay homeowner Ann Schweichler. "The design we went with was pretty much his first draft. And the key to the whole con-

(left) All of the rock work was placed stone by stone on this lakefront property including the pathway down to a lakeside terrace hidden among the boulders at the water's edge. (facing page) The home's color palette pulls from the slate flooring leading from the entryway to the kitchen, which features rustic cherry cabinetry and Caesarstone quartz countertops.